

Department of Religious Studies

Master of Arts

The Department of Religious Studies at the University of Missouri-Columbia offers a full-time, 2 year Master of Arts degree designed to provide a solid, up-to-date foundation in the academic study of religion with particular emphasis on theory and methods in religious studies.

- Teaching Assistantships with tuition wavers available
- Opportunities for interdisciplinary work with outstanding scholars in related disciplines
- Strong mentoring, whether you are seeking the MA as a terminal degree or planning to continue your studies in a PhD program.
- Thesis or portfolio options

Graduate Faculty:

Robert M. Baum – African and Indigenous Religions
Richard J. Callahan, Jr. – Religion in America
Daniel Cohen – South Asian Religions; Religion and Neuroscience
Signe Cohen – South Asian Religions
Edward Drott – East Asian Religions
Carrie Duncan – Biblical Studies
Bob Flanagan – Religion and Culture
Rabia Gregory – History of Christianity
Nathan Hofer – Islam and Judaism
Dennis Kelley – American Indian and Indigenous Religions

Areas of Emphasis:

American Religious History
Religions of Indigenous Peoples
History of Christianity
Judaism
Islam
Biblical Studies
Religions of East Asia
Religions of South Asia
Native American Religion
Religion and Neuroscience
Religion and Popular Culture
Religion and Society
Religion and Gender

For more information, contact:

Signe Cohen
Director of Graduate Studies
cohens@missouri.edu
573.882.4769

<http://religiousstudies.missouri.edu/>